Newton, Massachusetts

Jessica Tracy is the head of growth and partnerships at Enthea, a mental health solution that helps employers and unions cover innovative mental health treatments, such as ketamine-assisted therapy (KAT) and Stellate Ganglion Block (SGB). With nearly 20 years in health care, Jessica's expertise includes underwriting, data analytics, business development, and consulting across various specialties including group insurance, clinical genetics, at-home diagnostics, and psychedelic assisted therapy. Before joining Enthea, she was involved in crafting health insurance and cost-containment strategies for large employers and unions. She subsequently moved into clinical genetics, where she advanced insurance coverage for genetic testing and pharmacogenomics, improving access for employers, unions, and payors. She also oversaw the labor and trust division for the firm. For Enthea, she leads partner education and client expansion efforts across employers, unions, EAPs, and TPAs. Jessica holds various designations, including Group Benefits Disability Specialist and Commercial Lines Coverage Specialist, and has also completed extensive courses through the Hartford School of Insurance, Commercial Lines Producer School, International Foundation of Employee Benefit Plans, and Employee Benefits Producer Training Program through The National Alliance for Insurance Education & Research for Employee Benefits, Marketing and Risk Management. She also holds various certifications from the SoundMind Institute, a Psychedelic Research, Training, and Treatment Facility, including Introduction to Psychedelic Therapies, Essential Contemplative Practices of Psychedelic Therapists, and Psychedelic Facilitator Training.
